Commonwealth of Pennsylvania,
Department of the Fire Marshal,
Harrisburg, May 27, 1918.

Hon. Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Sir: In accordance with the requirements of the Act approved the third day of June, 1911, establishing the office of the State Fire Marshal, I have the honor to submit, for your consideration, the report of transactions of the Department for the years 1916 and 1917.

Very respectfully,

G. CHAL. PORT,
State Fire Marshal.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE
DEPARTMENT OF THE STATE FIRE MARSHAL
1916 AND 1917

During the year 1916, 15,728 fires involving a loss of $14,431,132 were reported to this Department, compared with 15,271 fires reported in 1917 involving a loss of $17,363,605. The increase of $2,932,473 loss for 1917 over 1916 can be largely attributed to the unprecedented activities throughout the State since the declaration of war through which many angles of safety were more or less disregarded or overlooked in the effort to meet the heavy demand upon industrial and commercial life. Approximately two-thirds of the fires reported in 1916 and 1917, a decrease of 457, were strictly or partly preventable and were due to carelessness, indifference, and neglect, to regard with reasonable attention the precautions necessary to prevent fires.

A careful review of the appended tables will indicate with greater effect than a cumbersome detailed report the causes and conditions resulting in fire not only in this State, but also similarly throughout the country.

To prevent and reduce the serious aspects and drain that this unwarranted and irrecoverable waste will otherwise ultimately achieve, it is paramountly an important object to concentrate the work of the State Fire Marshal Department along constructive and progressive lines of Fire Prevention and obtain and apply remedial legislation where cooperation fails. The State Fire Marshal Law defines broadly its enactment as a Fire Prevention measure, providing that the State Fire Marshal, his deputies and assistants shall determine the causes of all fires, investigate and prosecute fires of incendiary origin, and to inspect all properties as far as practicable for the purpose of having removed or remedied all conditions liable to fire and endangering other property. This is a most arduous task and requires time, patience and hard work.

There are 2,542 assistants to the State Fire Marshal appointed in all civil divisions in the State, whose duty as prescribed by law is the reporting of all fires that occur in their respective districts, to investigate into the cause and origin of such fires, and reporting to the Department of all conditions in their districts that in any manner present fire hazards and liable to the endangering of other property.

The State Fire Marshal Act provides that these appointments be extended to the Chiefs of the Fire Departments, and where no Fire Department is maintained, to the Burgess of the Borough or the President or the Chairman of the Board of Supervisors of the Townships.

This service in some instances is given considerable attention by the assistants, but in all cases of incendiary fires and special inspection it is necessary to assign the deputies to this service, a comparatively small force, by reason of limited appropriation being inadequate to allow the fee provided by law for special investigations and inspections by assistants. Therefore, much of the work depends upon the public spirit of the citizens so appointed.

EDUCATION AND PUBLICITY.

Education and publicity are undoubtedly of inestimable advantage in bringing to the knowledge of the public the conditions causing fire and the precautions that should be maintained to reduce to a minimum the possibility of the occurrence of fire.

In this effort approximately 700,000 copies of bulletins and other literature were distributed during 1916 and 1917 through the State, the result of which has shown encouraging reductions of fire losses in many sections and a greater activity for the betterment of conditions.

No subject is more vital to the citizens of the State than that of Fire Prevention and it is manifest to believe that the subject each year will be given more attention.

In 1917, October 9th was officially set aside by Your Excellency as Fire Prevention Day, to be observed by the people as a means of arousing the citizens to the magnitude of the fire waste and inducing them to take more interest in the subject of Fire Prevention. The response to this initial occasion in the State was extremely beneficial, in that its object is arousing the citizens to their individual responsibility was generally successful and provided a closer cooperation with the State Fire Marshal Department.

Fire Prevention should also be urgently advocated in the public schools with respect to special courses of instruction in the causes and dangers of fires and the inauguration and continuance of fire drills,* and it is hoped that with the cooperation and support of the Superintendent of Public Instruction this feature will be successfully arranged.

The Department has also actively engaged in educating the public in Fire Prevention by participating in and addressing numerous meetings of associations and organizations and has frequently suggested methods as to prevention and protection and its proper organization, which it stands ready to do at all times and lend such other efforts within the scope of its authority. It is the purpose within the near future to enlarge upon this work by educational exhibits which will be a great advancement in the Fire Prevention movement.

INCENDIARY INVESTIGATIONS.

During 1916 and 1917, 664 reported suspicious and incendiary fires were investigated by the Department with the following results:

Incendiary, ...	174
Partial evidence to indicate incendiary, ...	267
No evidence of incendiary, ...	223
Arrests, ...	199
Convictions, ...	106
Acquittals, ...	35
Bills ignored, quashed and nolle prossed, ...	25
Left jurisdiction of the State, ...	10
Suicide awaiting trial, ...	1
Awaiting trial, ...	19
Under investigation, ...	21

Arson is the most difficult crime to detect, principally by reason of the fact that the evidence at the scene of the fire is in most cases destroyed, and the burning is arranged so secretly by the perpetrator that it is oftentimes extremely hard in cases where incendiarism exists to secure sufficient evidence to warrant conviction.

In the majority of the incendiary cases the cause predominates in the purpose of persons endeavoring to recover insurance carried upon their property, which has frequently been found to exceed the actual value of the property. Incendiarism has been found to be extensively the case among persons in financial difficulty and those commercializing otherwise for gain, and in cases where over-insurance has been obtained the incentive has been more apparent. A small percentage of incendiary fires were due to pyromaniacs, which are quite difficult to prevent in the initial stage, and a few cases were committed for personal malice. Of approximately 2,000 cases specially investigated by the Department within the past 5 years, the design of this crime was found generally to have been committed under the reasons above given.

Incendiarism can be successfully reduced by concentrated and unrelaxing efforts of the State Fire Marshal Department and other authorities, but principal stress must be laid upon the Fire Insurance Companies for proper examination of properties and the investigation of the owners before a reasonable insurance is written, so as to remove or lessen primarily this element of the cause.

INSPECTION—FIRE PREVENTION.

Fire Prevention lies fundamentally in the inspection of buildings and premises for the purpose of eliminating fire hazards and to stimulate care to be exercised by owners and occupants to keep their buildings free of all conditions that may cause fire. During 1916, 3,022 inspections were made by this Department on the basis of which 1,039 orders were issued to correct fire hazard conditions. Among the orders issued the principal causes were for the removal and proper disposal of rubbish and waste accumulation; for the installation of fire extinguishers, and the removal of explosive oils from buildings. Twenty-nine (29) dilapidated buildings especially liable to fire and endangering other property were ordered torn down.

In 1917, 7,079 inspections were made upon which were issued 1,599 orders, principally among which included the condemnation of 284 dilapidated buildings especially liable to fire, removal and proper disposal of rubbish and waste accumulation, installation of fire extinguishers, removal of explosive oils from buildings, and chimneys repaired or reconstructed.

The action of the Department in ordering the correction of conditions to prevent the possibility of fire has succeeded in creating general activity along this line, which is indicated by the fact that in 1916, 1,983, and in 1917, 5,699 (an increase of 3,716), properties were found to be in good condition and free from fire hazards.

Similar inspections have also been undertaken locally under the supervision of the Fire Department, and this work has done much in the lessening of fire hazard.

Inspection services must be followed under systematic methods and invaluable assistance can be given by the citizens in cleaning and keeping clean their premises from fire breeding materials. The State Fire Marshal Department is endeavoring to make Pennsylvania fire-proof, and asks the cooperation of all to that end. Fire waste will be reduced if the causes are removed.

The functions of Fire Insurance Companies are often misunderstood in the payment of fire losses. What they dispense is not new wealth that takes the place of that which is lost, but it is the money gathered from others to give the insured as a substitute for his property loss. In other words, it is the shifting of the burden of loss from the individual to the community, and the community is poorer by exactly the amount of the loss incurred by the individual. Fire waste is an irrecoverable loss and drain upon resources, so it is emphatically urged that daily, weekly or periodical inspections be individually made to remove this menace.

The State Fire Marshal Department urgently recommends the installation of lightning rods* as a means to prevent the possibility of fire after the stroke. It is not the function of the lightning rod to prevent the building from being struck by lightning, but it is the means by which the charge is grounded and thereby protecting the property from destruction from fire which otherwise is invariably the result.

Lightning losses are more evidenced in rural districts on account of the isolation of buildings, and it is urged upon the farmers particularly to protect their buildings and the products of their labor.

In 1916, 1,716, and 1917, 2,070 lightning fire losses, entailing a loss of $1,810,557, were reported to the Department, only a small percentage affecting buildings equipped with lightning rods, and the losses upon these were extremely light. Of a total of 3,786 lightning fire losses in 1916 and 1917, only 20 losses were sustained upon building equipped with lightning rods, and in 5 cases the rods were defective. This in itself shows the protection afforded by lightning rods.

SPECIAL CONSERVATION WORK.

The participation of the United States in the world war in 1917 indicated that the successful prosecution thereof depended to a large degree on the maximum production of essentials to equip and supply our Army and Navy, and those of our Allies, and the conservation of food and other necessities in the course of production and temporary storage. To this end special attention was devoted to the inspection of factories, mills, grain elevators, storage and warehouses, and other buildings of similar class, to prevent additional hazards arising and to eliminate those that were in existence. Cooperating with the United States Government approximately 5,000 inspections were made of factories, flour mills, storage and warehouses, commercial establishments, and other manufacturing and essential supplying establishments to remove any hazards in the effort to conserve the supply and to prevent interruption of the output.

Particular attention has been urged that establishments of this kind be adequately and sufficiently guarded to prevent destruction, not only from fire occurring in the course of operation, but also from outside agencies.

COOPERATION.

It has been the endeavor and aim of the State Fire Marshal Department to establish for the citizens of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania a department devoted to civic and economical advancement, and the appeals for cooperation have been responded to gratifyingly by the State, County, and Municipal authorities, as well as by numerous organizations, the press, and the citizens in general.

In this connection it is creditably due that the firemen of this State (many departments of which represent the State Fire Marshal Department in their respective districts) should be commended upon the services they are called upon to perform in Fire Prevention and Protection. A great deal of work has been done by the firemen in the organization of bureaus providing for systematic inspection of properties in their districts, the result of which has afforded direct cooperation in the elimination of fire hazards. The Department at this time takes pleasure in acknowledging the cooperation of the firemen of the State.

The assistants to the State Fire Marshal also are to be commended upon the activities they have undertaken in their respective districts, the work of which has called for considerable of their time more as a public duty than for the remuneration received.

Fire Prevention demands cooperation and cooperation in turn rewards.

"It ain't the individual
Nor the Department as a whole,
But the everlastin' team-work
Of every bloomin' soul."

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Act of June 3rd, 1911, establishing the office of the State Fire Marshal, while specific in general, does not in some instances provide sufficiently for a broad expansion in certain sections thereof to meet various conditions necessary for effective Fire Prevention. It is proposed to ask the next General Assembly for the amendment of certain provisions to strengthen and increase particular powers thereof to meet all necessary requirements in this respect, and at the same time with the thought in view of not creating any unnecessary hardships upon those who might be affected.

CONCLUSION.

I have high praise for the employees of the State Fire Marshal Department for their loyal and efficient support, and my best endeavors will be continued to effect an organization in the interest of the people of Pennsylvania for the most effectual and economical results.

SUGGESTIONS FOR LIGHTNING RODS APPLYING TO ALL STRUCTURES.

Either copper or iron is satisfactory for Lightning conductors. One advantage of iron over copper is its higher fusing point, but iron should not be used in locations difficult of access where corrosion is likely or possible, owing to the necessity of frequent painting to guard against such corrosion.

Conductors when made of copper to be soft-drawn in the form of either tape or standard cable. Except as noted below, the conductor in each case to weigh not less than six ounces per foot. Where cable form is used, no single copper wire to be less than No. 12 B. & S. gauge, while if tape form the thickness to be not less than 3-32 inch.

When used on residences, barns, stables, stores and similar buildings where the maximum height of any point does not exceed sixty feet, and where corrosion is not liable to occur to any extent, copper cable to weigh not less than three ounces per foot, no single wire being less than .046 diameter.

Conductors when made of iron to be in the form of either heavy tape or pipe. The tape conductor to weigh not less than $11\frac{1}{4}$ pounds per foot and to be not less than 3-32 inch thick. If pipe is used the standard weight of $\frac{3}{4}$ inch pipe would be satisfactory. Iron used in any form should be thoroughly galvanized to prevent corrosion, and may also be painted if desired.

Conductors to have as few joints as possible, these to be mechanically and electrically secured and to be protected from corrosion.

Conductors to be fastened securely in place, suitable allowance being made for expansion, by clamps of same material as conductors, the vertical rods being carried a sufficient distance from the wall to avoid sharp bends around projecting masonry or brick work. In all cases as straight a run as possible should be provided and the conductors should incline downward. The conductors should never be run through iron pipes.

Conductors to be run as far as practicable from interior piping.

Air terminals to be solid, not less than $\frac{3}{4}$ inch in diameter except on residences, barns, stables, stores and similar buildings where they may be of tubing not less than $\frac{5}{8}$ inch in diameter with wall thickness not less than .31 inch. Terminals to extend not less than 18 inches above the point protected.

All exterior metal work, such as metal roofs, gutters, ventilators, railings, chimney hoods, etc., to be connected with the lightning rod system below the line of the metal work itself or to be separately grounded by regular conductors.

All interior masses of metal such as girders, beams, water piping and any structural iron or steel, though under no consideration gas piping, to be securely connected to the system at their highest and lowest points, the connecting bonds being the regular conductor.

A permanent and reliable ground is absolutely essential, and by far the best ground can usually be secured by connection to underground metallic water piping. When this is impracticable, ground plates, driven pipes, or the equivalent are recommended.

Connection to piping to be made preferably by soldering the conductor into a brass plug and forcibly screwing the plug into the pipe fitting, or when the pipes are cast iron, into a hole tagged into the pipe itself; or, by sweating the conductor into a lug attached to an approved clamp and firmly bolting the clamp to the pipe after the rust and scales have been removed.

In the case of a farm building having a well outside and a pump suction pipe running to the building, a reasonably good ground may be obtained by connecting the conductor to the pipe, provided the pipe at some point is in earth below permanent moisture level.

Connection to ground plates to be made by riveting and soldering, and the connection to be thoroughly protected against corrosion by painting. The ground plates to be of copper and not less than No. 16 Stubb gauge about three feet square and buried below the permanent moisture level with about two feet of crushed coke or charcoal above and below it.

Connection to driven pipe to be made by soldering the conductor into a brass plug and forcibly screwing the plug into a coupling on the upper end of the pipe. The lower end of the pipe to be well below permanent moisture level.

FIRE DRILLS IN SCHOOLS.

Prepared by the Fire Marshal under the Direction of the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The following are the rules and regulations issued under date of October 2, 1912, by the State Fire Marshal for observance in the schools of Pennsylvania.

1. The general intention of fire drills is to prevent panics usually accompanying fires or an alarm of fire.
2. Owing to the physical conditions of schools throughout the State, drills must of necessity be varied to meet the condition of school buildings.
3. Fire drills must be held at least twice a month.
4. The district superintendent of schools shall instruct the principals and teachers as to their duties and arrange the time of holding drills.
5. Bell signals for fires shall be used exclusively.
6. The bell signal for fire drills shall be one long followed by four short rings and the code for fire drills must be posted in each class room.
7. At the sound of the fire signal, all work must cease instantly. Pupils will rise and march as directed, boys leading.
8. Teachers should follow to be sure that no child has been left behind, sometimes a teacher or an older child might lead, but if the teacher gets too far from the end of the line he or she might not be able to get back to take care of the possible excited straggler.
9. Boys should lead, girls follow, or if possible separate exits should be taken. Boys often trample girls in a rush and girls are sure to be frightened at boys coming down behind them.
10. Children should be taught in the course of drills to overcome obstructions, to be prepared to meet them at the time of actual fire.
11. The movement of children shall be by the shortest route and there shall be no crossing of lines.
12. Classes near stairway shall precede those further away, lower floor classes shall precede upper floor classes.
13. Pupils shall move in sets of two, three or four, as most convenient and must be taught to absolutely obey orders as to formation and march.

14. All movements of classes shall be by MARCHING, not by running, and teachers must not urge or hurry pupils, but must use every effort to prevent excitement and preserve steadiness and precision in line.

15. Fire escapes must be used as far as possible as a regular means of exit, so that the scholars may become accustomed to their location and use; fire escapes must at all times be kept free from obstruction of any character, and during the winter must be kept clear of ice and snow; ashes or sand must be used in case of sleet, or when found impossible to otherwise make them safe for use.

16. Each school is emptied four times a day (two recesses and two dismissals) and these dismissals should be conducted practically in every respect like a fire drill, excepting that the time of dismissal bell signal is used instead of the fire drill signal.

17. The dates upon which fire drills are held must be reported by each principal to the district superintendent, and the district superintendent shall include a copy of this report in his monthly report to the Superintendent of Public Instruction at Harrisburg.
